The academic programme of Rajiv Gandhi Institute has a strong support of scientists from prestigious Institutes such as Interactive Research School of Health Affairs (IRSHA), Bharati Vidyapeeth and National Chemical Laboratory (NCL). Rajiv Gandhi Institute has signed MOU's & Jay Biotech for research & conducting workshops respectively.

SCOPE OF BIOTECHNOLOGY

Biotechnology is an emerging inter disciplinary branch of science that applies the principles of biology and engineering and offers scientists all the background material, indispensable for the development of biotechnological processes and products. It also offers a unique collection of current information on all aspects in biotechnology research and genomics, bioinformatics, special processes, metabolism and legal, economic and ethical dimensions.

Advances in science and technology have transformed traditional biotechnology techniques, such as selective breeding, hybridization and mutagenesis, into modern ones such as recombinant DNA techniques and tissue culture. This transformation has opened the door to more varied applications in areas such as health care, the environment, forestry, industrial processes and others.

Discoveries in genetics have led to novel strategies for treating disease. Decades ago, scientists learned that DNA is mainly the archive of genetic information. Its orders are translated into action by segments of ribonucleic acid (RNA), which serve as the working blueprints for all proteins. Today, chemists are beginning to create valuable new drugs by fabricating "anti-sense" segments of RNA, whose sequence is the exact opposite of an unwanted sequence, to combine with certain existing strands of RNA and thus block the action of specific genes.

Agriculture clearly needs new and safer tools to manage a range of insects and plant diseases. Fortunately, the pesticide industry has discovered and brought to market some very effective, safer and selective biopesticides and closely related synthetic analogues. These "reduced risk" pesticides are key new tools for farmers. Within a few years, millions of farmers worldwide will use these biopesticides to reduce their reliance on risky, disruptive broad-spectrum insecticides.

Exciting prospects are likely to result from industrial-scale plant tissue culture. This may soon obviate the need for rearing whole plants in order to generate valuable commodities such as dyes, flavorings, drugs, and chemicals. Cloning techniques could prove to be the way to tackle some of the acute problems of reforestation in semi-desert areas. Plants grown from the cells of mature trees could greatly speed up the process. Combination of advantageous genes could bring about a new era in plant protection. The crop can be treated safely with more effective doses of weed killer, and it is also engineered to be less susceptible to insect damage.

Ranadeep Das: Bachelor of Science (Biotechnology) Passout Year :2020
Currently Pursuing: Master of Science (Life Science), National Institute of Technology, Rourkela

RGI has become a part of my life since I joined the institution. In the beginning, I had absolutely no path to go forward in my academic career. As time progressed, RGI facilitated me to understand the value of the course, as well as my own worth in it. The academic environment and the freedom to experiment with my thoughts and ideas provided by the esteemed faculty in the institute helped me to develop strong foundation for the course. Possessing well-equipped and maintained laboratories as well as high-quality research being pursued by the faculty, the institute provided every kind of resource that I needed to learn about the field of biotechnology. The provision of extra-curricular activities including annual fests, cultural as well as sporting events through various committees imparted me an all-round development and helped me to recognize my own skills and talents. The field trips and industrial visits conducted by the institute provided me a practical exposure to the application of the theoretical concepts in the real world. The faculty members are more than mere teachers, they are like parents to me. They are ever-ready to discuss any issue that a student might have, be it professionally or personally. This opinion of mine may appear to be sugar-coated, but the fact is that it isn't. I am currently pursuing my Master's in a premier nationalized institution wherein I have interacted with students from across the country. And I am proud to say that none of them has had a better overall experience during their Bachelor's than that of me. In fact, most of them did not receive any laboratory experience during their graduation. Therefore, I believe RGI is one of the best institutions in the country to pursue a graduation in biotechnology. I shall always be grateful to all the teachers, students, as well as the non-teaching staff members of RGI for all the help, lessons and guidance that they have given to me to build myself, both in my career and as an individual.
