About the session: The PG department recently hosted an eminent lecture on "Review of Literature, Manuscript Writing, and Publication," led by Dr. Doke, a distinguished scholar in medical research. Dr. Doke underscored the critical role of a comprehensive literature review in identifying research gaps and providing context for new studies. Practical strategies for effective manuscript writing were highlighted, emphasizing clarity, adherence to journal guidelines, and logical data presentation. The lecture also addressed the publication process, detailing peer review stages and the importance of revisions. A Q&A session allowed participants to interact directly with Dr. Doke, gaining valuable insights and guidance on navigating the complexities of academic publishing.
